

Westgold Operating as Usual

Westgold maintains continuity of its operations in the face of an ever-changing environment.

Westgold Resources Limited (Westgold or the Company) provides the following update relating to our response to the COVID-19 pandemic and the steps the Company has taken to protect our business, workforce, their families, suppliers and communities.

The Company's mine sites continue to operate, and all of our process plants are operating at full capacity, thanks to the multitude of ore sources Westgold has in the Murchison region.

The Company has been proactive with respect to its COVID-19 response, not only adapting our operational procedures in line with official health advice and government directives but also implementing changes in anticipation of further restrictions. This has effectively minimised any current and future disruption to our business.

Westgold has previously provided the market with an update as to its guidance and will provide a further update, regarding production and cost guidance, when it is in a position to do so. The Company will continue to update the market on any material changes impacting its operations.

Westgold's Executive Chairman, Peter Cook said "We have some wonderfully committed people in our workforce who understand the magnitude of the current situation and the importance of keeping our people in jobs. We are pulling out all stops to maintain our outputs for our shareholders, our people and the broader family tree that lives from our economic output. It's an ever-changing situation and we're not sure what tomorrow brings but we're standing tall, ready to fight it and win".
